Marhaba

It is a great pleasure to welcome you aboard your Oman Air flight today.

I want to take the opportunity to wish all our Omani customers a belated, happy 46th National Day. This special day, on November 18, has not only been celebrated here in Oman but also around the globe at our various Oman Air offices.

On this day, patriotic Omanis rejoiced in their country's heritage through a series of events and festivals and also celebrated the birthday of our leader, His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said. Without the unique leadership of His Majesty, the Sultanate would not be the modern, peace-making nation it is today with a state-of-the-art infrastructure and highly educated citizens.

On the occasion of National Day Oman Air received a new Boeing 737-800 on November 18. Furthermore in line with the country's sentiments, we officially inaugurated the Oman Air Flight Simulator Training Centre that marks a new chapter in the history of Oman's civil aviation sector.

During the month of November, we added Najaf in Iraq as a new destination to our network. On December 9, 2016, Oman Air's inaugurates a new service to our first destination in China, Guangzhou. The new flight route consolidates efforts to strengthen bilateral relations between the two countries. We firmly believe in the importance of this market and hope to offer more flights to more destinations in China in the future.

New destinations reflect our ambitious and dynamic programme of network expansion, which also includes increased code share agreements and additional frequencies on our most popular routes.

With December, we have reached the last month of 2016. At the end of this month many of our guests will have their Season Holidays. Please allow me to wish all a Merry X-mas and Happy New Year.

I do hope that you relax on your flight today and enjoy our award winning cabin service. At Oman Air we continue to take great care to offer guests a unique expression of Omani hospitality, culture and identity.

Thank you for your loyalty for flying Oman Air.

Bahla Fort

LATITUDE: 22° 57' 52" N
LONGITUDE: 57° 18' 2" E

The magnificent Bahla Fort, located an easy two-hour drive from Muscat, is where you can experience the architectural and military engineering genius of Oman's historic Banu Nebhan tribe. And where your kids can be the princes and princesses of their very own castle for the day...

1. Bahla Fort – a registered UNESCO World Heritage Site – owes its existence to the Banu Nebhan, who were the dominant tribe that lived in this part of Oman from the 12th to 15th century.
2. As far as man-made, historic sites are concerned, Bahla Fort is one of the Sultanate of Oman's most impressive. If you only have time to explore one fort during your stay in Oman, you won't be disappointed with a visit to Bahla.
3. The gigantic structure of the Fort, along with the rest of the town, are magnificent examples of medieval Islamic architecture.
4. The Fort has a number of halls, receptions areas, hidden passages, mosques, and a number of smaller, secret rooms, which you and your kids can literally spend hours exploring.
5. The town of Bahla is also known for its 12 kilometre-long defensive wall, which was used to protect the Fort, as well as the surrounding settlements.
6. After a series of renovations, Bahla Fort was re-opened to the public in November 2012. Now, it is a wonderfully preserved, and authentic piece of the Sultanate of Oman's history.
7. The Fort dominates the area and is clearly visible from afar. From the fort's lookout points, you can get spectacular views and photos of the surrounding town of Bahla and the nearby Jebel Akhdar mountains.
8. Other not-to-miss forts in Oman include Nakhal Fort, set at the base of Nakhal Mountain, Nizwa Fort, with its huge, 24 metre-high central tower, Muttrah Fort, which overlooks Port Sultan Qaboos, the beautifully designed Jabrin Fort, as well as Jalali Fort and Mirani Fort, which are both located in the old part of Muscat, overlooking the Sea of Oman.
9. For an interesting, 'virtual tour experience' of Bahla Fort, visit www.virtualbahla.com
10. Bahla Fort is around a two-hour drive from Muscat (around 25 kilometres west of the town of Nizwa).

Visit Bahla Fort

Bahla Fort is open to visitors from 8:30am – 4:00pm (Saturday – Thursday), and 8:00am – 11:00am (Friday). (Note that these times occasionally vary, so it would be best to confirm opening hours with a local guide before your visit).

Guangzhou: China's city of abundance

Located just inland of China's south-eastern seaboard, Guangzhou has, since ancient times, been a place of abundant economic and cultural riches. Now, it also has everything the modern-day traveller would want – including a mind-boggling array of shopping opportunities, a highly efficient public transport system, and delicious Cantonese cuisine. Here's a look at some of the travel adventures on offer around this Chinese super-city...

Guangzhou's spectacular Liede Bridge, and the 595.7 metre high Canton Tower

'The people of Guangzhou are passionate about their food and as a traveller, you cannot help but be immersed in this culture of cuisine'

The Temple of Six Banyan Trees

Taste Cantonese cuisine: It's been said that out of the whole of China, Guangzhou has the largest number of restaurants per capita. Indeed, the people of Guangzhou are passionate about their food and as a traveller, you cannot help but be immersed in this culture of cuisine when visiting. In fact, Guangzhou has long been a trading port and many imported foods and ingredients are used in Cantonese cuisine, but the classic dishes usually include some form of lightly cooked fresh vegetables and meat, and sweet sauces. Go explore!

Take the family to Chimelong Paradise amusement park: Chimelong claims to be the largest amusement park in China. It has 70-plus rides, as well as a safari animal park, water-park with water rides, and even the fantastic Chimelong International Circus – all making it a perfect family destination for the day.

Cruise the Pearl River: A slow, lazy cruise down the Guangzhou section of China's majestic Pearl River – either at night or during the day – is one of the best ways to see the city, and one of the best ways to get good photos of its famous sights (many of which are located right next to the river).

Relax around Yuexiu Park: Yuexiu Park is Guangzhou's biggest public park. It covers an area of over 200 acres and includes three artificial lakes and several hilltops. This is where you and your family can come escape the hustle and bustle of the city for a while, take a picnic, and 'people-watch' the day away.

Get lost in the variety of products at the Canton Fair: The twice-yearly Canton Fair is China's biggest trade fair, and one of the most gigantic in the world. The variety of products on offer here is truly mind-boggling – electronics, vehicles, gifts and décor products, textiles, shoes, lifestyle goods, medicine, and much more.

Experience Guangzhou nightlife: For classical Guangzhou entertainment at night, a traditional Cantonese Opera at places like the Jiangnan Theater in Guangzhou's Haizhu district, will put you directly in touch with the finest of the city's performing arts culture. For something less formal, you could explore the cafes and bars of Guangzhou's Binjiang Road, Huanshi Road, and Bai'e Tan Road, as they come alive at night.

Climb the Canton Tower: The 595.7 metre high Canton Tower is the tallest structure in Guangzhou (and the second

For travellers, Guangzhou has a seemingly endless list of historical and sacred sites to explore tallest in China). These days, you're able to take a lift ride to the glass floor observatory at 488 metres to get a spectacular bird's eye view of the city. At night, the tower is beautifully illuminated with colourful light displays.

Visit the Temple of Six Banyan Trees: Guangzhou has a seemingly endless list of historical and sacred sites, but perhaps the most popular is the Temple of Six Banyan Trees – the sacred Buddhist temple which is said to have a history of around 1 500 years, and which has as its main feature, the magnificent nine storey high Flower Pagoda.

Go on a shopping adventure: Guangzhou's best buys typically include top clothing brands, cosmetics, furniture, and electrical products. The most well-known shopping streets are Beijing Road and Shangxiajiu Road – both of which have hundreds of department stores. Two of Guangzhou's top malls are the CTF Finance Tower, and the Mall of the World.

Explore Shamian Island: Shamian Island is an island on the Guangzhou section of China's 2 400 kilometre-long Pearl River. The entire island has been declared an official historical area, as it serves as a tranquil reminder of Guangzhou's previous European colonial period. It's a popular spot for tourists and there are several restaurants and curio shops here.

Guangzhou: Travel Info

Oman Air flies 4 times a week between Muscat/Guangzhou

Travel Info: Visit the official tourism site www.visitgz.com for more info on travelling to Guangzhou.

Visa Requirements: For more info on tourism visa requirements for travelling to Guangzhou, visit your local Chinese Embassy, Consulate, or other Chinese diplomatic mission.

When to go: October, November and December are generally considered the best times to visit Guangzhou for tourism, but April and May are also popular. The city has a sub-tropical climate with humidity levels at their highest in the summer, when temperatures reach over 30 degrees Celsius. (Typhoon season is from June through to September).

Languages: Mandarin is Guangzhou's official language, but most local people speak Cantonese (Guangzhou was once called Canton City). English is also occasionally spoken.

Currency: The Renminbi (RMB/¥) is the official currency of the People's Republic of China. The Yuan (CNY) is also used to refer to the Chinese currency generally, especially in international contexts. Renminbi banknotes come in (frequently used) denominations of ¥0.1, ¥0.5, ¥1, ¥5, ¥10, ¥20, ¥50, and ¥100. Coins come in (frequently used) denominations of ¥0.1, ¥0.5, and ¥1.

Diving into the Sea of Oman

The Sultanate of Oman has over 3 000km of spectacular coastline – as well as several offshore ‘desert’ islands. And nearly all of it is prime territory for SCUBA diving, snorkelling, and freediving.

The Sultanate of Oman has a fantastically rich maritime history, going back more than 5 000 years ago. During these times, Oman’s merchants and explorers brought wealth to the country through their spirit of adventure, their bold explorations of the sea, and their willingness to engage with new cultures and economies.

Today, this rich relationship that Oman has with the sea continues in many ways. One of these is through the SCUBA diving, snorkelling, and freediving adventures that take place every weekend in the Sultanate, at places like the Daymaniyat Islands, Bander Khayran, ‘Fahal’ Island, and the Musandam Peninsula. Here’s a showcase of some of these not-to-be-missed dive spots. Come Join us as we dive into the Sea of Oman...

Daymaniyat Islands: The Daymaniyat Islands are a collection of rocky desert islands surrounded by coral reefs, that are around a 30 minute boat ride from the mainland. These islands have been protected as a nature reserve since 1996, and provide an important nesting site for hawksbill and green turtles, as well as a wide range of migratory birds. There are well over a dozen well-known dive sites here – with much of the undersea terrain being spectacular rocky reefs, giant boulders, drop-offs, and cave systems; all combined with rich coral reef eco-systems, and a huge variety of tropical marine life and fish species. There are also turtles to be seen, various species of sharks and rays, and whale sharks – which are regularly encountered from July to September.

Bander Khayran: At Bander Khayran, which is an easy 20 minute boat journey south-east of Muscat, there are several dive sites located around a series of small bays and inlets. Most of the diving consists of relatively shallow coral and rocky reefs, but there is also one of the most popular wreck dives in Oman here – the 84 metre-long Al Munassir shipwreck, which was purposefully sunk for divers in 2003 in around 29 metres of water.

Mina Fahal Island: ‘Fahal Island’ is another dive location that is easily accessible by boat from Muscat. It is a small limestone island around 4 kilometres offshore of the mainland, and offers excellent diving with swim-throughs and reefs down to 40 metres. It’s also known Shark Island, due to the frequent sightings here of Black Tip Reef Sharks.

Musandam Peninsula: The Musandam Peninsula, Oman’s exclave on the northern tip of the Arabian Peninsula, has around two dozen well-known dive sites, as well as a bunch of semi-secret, out-of-the-way spots. Most of the diving consists of wall dives below Musandam's giant sea-cliffs that drop directly down into the Strait of Hormuz waters. Along with these spectacular wall dives, there are coral gardens; shipwrecks; and an incredibly rich diversity of marine life (both large and small) to explore on scuba, or simply by snorkelling.

‘The 84 metre-long Al Munassir ship, which was purposefully sunk for divers in 2003 at Bander Khayran, is one of Oman’s most popular wreck dives’

'Fahal Island is also known as Shark Island, due to the frequent sightings here of Black Tip Reef Sharks'

Oman's waters are home to a huge variety of marine life - including the much-loved Hawksbill Turtle

The Sea of Oman is a diver's dream destination. Don't come to Oman without packing your dive gear!

Of course, there's over 3 000 kilometres of Oman's coastline for divers to explore, including the slightly less accessible, but equally interesting dive spots around Mirbat and Salalah, as well as the relatively un-explored and un-touched Al Hallaniyat Islands, located off the country's southern coastline.

So if you are a total beginner diver, or a master diver with hundreds of dives on your logbook, the Sultanate of Oman's spectacular underwater world is waiting for you. Don't come to Oman without packing your dive gear!

Sultanate of Oman: Diving Conditions?

- Diving conditions in the Sea of Oman tend vary, but underwater visibility of around 8 – 10 metres can generally be expected. The water temperature is usually between 22 – 32 degrees Celsius.
- There are several well-established dive schools and dive charters operating from Muscat, Musandam, and Salalah.

Freediving, and Oman's Pearl Diving Heritage

In the past, along with many other nations in the Gulf, Oman was also a key area for the pearl diving industry, and the ability of Oman's pearl divers was legendary. They dived while holding their breaths, and uncovered some famously beautiful pearls from the depths. And it is this spirit of pearl diving that could be the reason why the sport of freediving – which relies on a diver's ability to hold their breath underwater – is quickly establishing itself in the Sultanate of Oman, and why there are an increasing number of divers heading off into the deep every weekend to freedive Oman's popular dive spots.

Bangkok's Grand Palace: The spiritual heart of the Thai Kingdom

It's been said that the Grand Palace in Bangkok is the spiritual heart of the Thai Kingdom. However, with the recent passing of Thailand's much-loved King Bhumibol Adulyadej, the Palace has lately experienced a surge in visitors, as admirers and mourners come to show their admiration and devotion for their late King – and their respect for Thailand's spirituality and culture. Here's a bit more about Bangkok's much-loved landmark...

Probably the most visited and remembered landmark of Thailand, the Grand Palace in Bangkok is where every traveller should pay a visit to at least once in their lifetime.

It has now been an esteemed architectural symbol of Thailand for many years, and for travellers to Bangkok, walking through and exploring the Palace courtyards and their brilliantly gold and jewelled temples is like stepping inside the magnificent world of a Thailand fantasy storybook or film set.

The construction of the Grand Palace began in 1782 during the reign of King Rama I, the founder of Thailand's Chakri Dynasty, and served as the royal residence up until 1925, after which it was used only ceremonial purposes only. In its current state, the Palace is divided into three main zones: The Outer Court, home to royal offices, public buildings, and the Temple of the Emerald

Buddha; the Middle Court, which is where the most important residential and state buildings are; and the Inner Court, which is exclusively reserved for Thailand's nobility.

The Temple of the Emerald Buddha – one of the most significant features of the Palace – is an exquisitely decorated temple at the heart of the complex, and one of the most sacred sites in Thailand.

When planning your visit to the Grand Palace, keep in mind that place gets very crowded. In fact, experienced Grand Palace guides will suggest being in line to visit the Palace well before

Oman Air and the Extreme Sailing Series: A platform for success

Last year, almost 1 000 brave souls from around the world stepped out from their familiar work routines as corporate executives to experience a 'once in a lifetime' white-knuckle ride on an ultra-fast Extreme racing boat.

Among these were unsuspecting travel agents and corporate clients who had accepted an invitation from Oman Air to meet their professional sailing team competing in the Extreme Sailing Series, one of the world's highest profile racing circuits supported by Oman Sail since 2009.

Few would have had any idea what they had let themselves in for but far from being just another corporate hospitality 'jolly', these exhilarating roller coaster rides with the Oman Air sailing team have laid the foundations for one of the most successful sponsorship partnerships in Omani sport.

Sailing offers opportunities that few other promotional channels can, says Salma Al Hashmi, Chief Marketing Officer at Oman Sail who has successfully pioneered the sport as a means of reviving the Sultanate's rich maritime heritage. 'As soon as the guests meet the crew and sail the boat, they are hooked. It is a 'money can't buy experience' which creates a very strong emotional connection to the team, the event and the brand and you only get that in sport,' she said.

Oman Sail first invited Oman Air to back their hugely successful Extreme Sailing activities in 2010 since they both shared the same objectives, to promote the Sultanate of Oman as a high-end tourist destination and to contribute to its social and economic development.

The fact that Oman Sail's teams have been so successful – winning the Extreme Sailing Series crown five times between 2009 and 2015 – may account for their astonishing profile. Featured in 862 newspaper and magazine articles, 268 video clips and almost 5 000 online items means a massive amount of exposure across the globe.

More than 600 hours of live and replayed television, involving some 58 leading broadcasters ensures that Oman and Oman Air's colours are recognised on every continent and when the Extreme Sailing Series rolls into Muscat, as it does in March every year, the level of marine leisure tourism enquiries soar.

'We are exceeding all our targets in brand visibility and media exposure – the sailing team are working hard and doing well and our communications team are doing the same off the water so as a joint effort, it has been hugely successful,' said Al Hashmi.

In total, a remarkable OMR 3 425 664 in advertising value equivalent (AVE) was generated for Oman Air by Oman Sail in 2015 but it is not just about the numbers. 'Whenever possible, we also use Oman Air's participation in the circuit as a platform for promoting the airline's direct routes, in particular the UK and Germany so the Extreme Sailing Series has become a versatile platform that both Oman Air and Oman Sail are extremely proud to be part of.'

With just one event in Sydney, Australia, to go in the 2016 Extreme Sailing Series, Oman Air has a slender two-point lead in the overall rankings, having been THE boat to beat all year. So this final push for victory will be a white-knuckle ride like no other.

Treasures from the National Museum: Sultanate of Oman hospitality

The ritual of serving Omani coffee is symbolic of the Sultanate's tradition of hospitality – with dates, Omani halwā or fruits also being served. Jamal al-Moosawi, the National Museum's Acting Director-General, and Moza al-Wardi, the Head of Curatorial Unit, guide us through this wonderful, and important Omani hospitality.

Nazwa-style coffee pot (dallah Nazwaniyyah)

Origin: Made by Khalfan bin Rashid as-Sabahi

Region: Nazwa, ad-Dakhiliyah Governorate

Material: Silver, with leather-wrapped handle

Period: 1393 – 94 AH/1974 CE

The virtue of hospitality is a key attribute of the Omani people, stemming from the historical struggle for survival in a challenging environment with scarce resources. In the past, human contact was paramount; the traveller was almost the sole source of news and information, and a traveller's safety hinged directly upon a friendly welcome and the offer of food and drink.

Today, Omani hospitality continues to be associated with compassionate treatment of visitors. Treating guests cordially is considered a social and religious virtue. The ritual of serving Omani coffee is symbolic of this tradition of hospitality – and it is complimented with servings of dates, Omani halwā, or fruits...

The silver souq in Nazwa is renowned as a centre for the making of one of Oman's most important cultural icons – the coffee pot (dallah). The classic Nazwa-style coffee pot is characterised by a very narrow waist, a gracefully arched handle and a long, emphatically curved spout, and has an inherent elegance of form that renders even the simplest version an object of beauty in its own right.

Producers of the Nazwa-style coffee pot share the use of traditional designs and techniques with souq jewellers and khanjar-makers, their work being characteristic of the great silver souq itself rather than of a particular craft or producer category. This example features a combination of arabesque and geometric designs. The inscription on the bottom of the pot reads: (K. R. 21/6/1974), a reference to its maker (Khalfan bin Rashid as-Sabahi) and its date of completion.

Singapore's glorious Gardens by the Bay

Located next to Singapore's spectacular Marina Reservoir, the Gardens by the Bay spans 101 hectares of reclaimed land, and make for a dream destination and day outing for families and kids. Here are the highlights...

Be mesmerised at the Supertree Grove: The Gardens by the Bay South Garden is the home of the Supertree Grove – the gigantic tree-shaped vertical gardens which are up to 16 storeys tall, and which, when night falls, come alive with the mesmerising Garden Rhapsody light and sound show. The famous OCBC Skyway – a 128 metre-long walkway, which is suspended from the Supertrees and which offers panoramic vistas of the Gardens and Marina Bay skyline – is also here.

Take to the heights at the Forest in the Clouds: This 35-metre high man-made mountain showcases plant life from the world's tropical highlands. It is veiled in mist and covered in lush vegetation and also happens forms part of what is considered the world's tallest indoor waterfall. You and your kids can take a lift to the top of the mountaintop to discover the unique biodiversity and geology of cloud forests, and then take a stroll along a 'walkway in the clouds' for an aerial view of the canopy and mountainside below, as the Gardens by the Bay guide explains.

Visit the largest glass greenhouse in the world at the Flower Dome: The Flower Dome is a replica of the cool-dry climates of the world, and houses an extensive collection of plants from these Mediterranean and desert-like regions. The Flower Dome, by the way, is currently listed as the largest glass greenhouse in the world. You'll discover not only beautifully plants and flowers here, but also learn about how they adapt to their unique environment. It's a fascinating spot for the whole family.

Explore plant kingdoms at the World of Plants: There literally is a world waiting to be explored at the Gardens by the Bay World of Plants. Here, you can find out how plants disperse their seeds, how mushrooms benefit rainforest communities, and how plants adapt to adverse environments. You can also enjoy the sights of flowers and fruits in bloom, learn how to identify different tree species, and see some of the most primitive plants on the planet.

Take time out at the Bay East Garden: Located just next to the Garden's by the Bay pavilions, the Bay East Garden features wide open lawns, and amazing views of the iconic conservatories and Supertrees against the Singapore Marina's skyline. This is where you want to be when you need a place to take time out to relax, or organise a picnic with the family. And it just happens to be open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

'At the Forest in the Clouds, you and your kids can take a lift to the top of the mountaintop and stroll along the 'walkway in the clouds' for an aerial view of the canopy and mountainside below'

Set up and do business in Oman: A guide for international businesses

Despite the recent economic downturn, the Sultanate of Oman offers great short and medium term opportunities for international organisations to do business in a broad range of sectors. Charles Shaw, the CEO of Bondoni – a specialist business setup and representation company in Oman – is a seasoned business leader that has first-hand international experience setting up and leading businesses in Oman, the UAE and Europe. Here he gives some insights on how international businesses can set up and do business in the Sultanate of Oman.

Recent, world leading initiatives from Oman's government, such as Tanfeedh (translated to 'Implement' in Arabic) are encouraging local Omani companies to diversify outside the oil and gas sector and into sectors such as tourism logistics, mining, IT, manufacturing and aquaculture.

These initiatives will present an immediate need for Omani companies to partner with international companies from all over the world to speed up the diversification process to increase GDP and employment in a more sustainable and diversified economy.

Oman Air is one of the leading Omani companies that has been central to Oman's diversification initiatives highlighted by its commitment to extend its global reach in tourism and cargo services.

Oman's Ministries have made a number of significant changes to help foreign companies to be 'open for business' in the Sultanate, including implementing an on-line one stop shop company registration process.

International organisations have the option of doing business in Oman depending on the degree of risk, the control and commitment of resources they require and the return on investment they expect. These range from a low, non-equity investment without having significant effects on the existing operations elsewhere, through to fully committed equity based operations, either by setting up your business in a Free-zone or with a local Omani partner or by acquiring a full or part share in a local business.

Many international companies want to venture into Oman by initially 'testing the water', and they spend valuable time and money on flights: they fly in, have their meetings and fly out again. However, without permanent local representation to follow up their efforts the probability of winning business is low due to them being 'out of sight, out of mind'.

Many Omanis prefer to do business with international organisations but rightly, in my opinion, they want that business to show commitment to the Omani market by having some kind of local presence.

Business set up options

Low cost 'In-Country' representation

There are many companies and individuals who say they can provide market entry and local representative services. However, choosing the right partner is crucial to avoid expensive false starts. A few tips include:

- Select a professional representation partner that focuses on these services as their core business: Many local companies will offer a service but if it's not core to their own business the relationship will soon end in disappointment.
- Objective setting: Select a representative who offers accountability by agreeing to 'SMART' objectives. These may vary from:

- Business development
- Existing client follow up
- Project management
- Reputation management/brand establishment
- Many others
- Professional fees versus profit share agency agreements: Select a provider that offers a professional service based on fees instead of profit share. Companies that want a profit share agreement normally have relationships with dozens of other organisations so there is little chance of receiving their full attention in this uncertain stage.
- Knowledge and multi-dimensional networks: Select a partner that has multi-dimensional professional, corporate and ministerial knowledge and a high level influential network. Many businesses will make 'door opening' promises but quiz them on the quality of their contacts.
- Trust and confidentiality: Select a representative that respects the soft, qualitative priorities in business, especially when working in such a small 'village' market environment.

- Availability: Quality business setup and representative companies will only commit to a few clients so they can be available and responsive to their client's requirements. It makes managing a business remotely so much easier knowing that there will always be an available dedicated Client Director on the ground.

Establishing a business with a local partner

Apart from GCC Nationals and US based businesses who take advantage of the Free Trade Agreement (FTA), international organisations generally need a local partner to set up a legal entity. Legally, the local partner has the right to own up to 30% of the shares. There are commercial alternatives but this is the start point. There is always a toss-up between partnering with a local Omani or a local company that already offers similar services, and setting up your own with a partner that will not interfere. There are clear benefits with both options but there are a few guidelines which may help you choose the best direction:

Control versus profit share erosion: During the early and risky time of setting up a business it is compelling to set up with a company that already knows the market and has pre-qualified contacts. There are clear short term benefits to trade off control for instant access by surrendering a large chunk of precious equity and profit share but as the business becomes more established, questions (and often friction) arise as to whether it was a wise decision. The alternative is to either choose a silent partner which means no interference with a low cost fee or an active local representation specialist that has the contacts and knowledge but has no conflicting distractions. The right company can process the set up quickly and efficiently.

Partner with a like-minded business: This is always a challenge. Initially the local business's enthusiasm will provide support to help with the initial set up. But beware. Their business will normally take priority over the 'new kid on the block'. There is a real danger of being treated as an 'add-on' unless both parties have similar core values and a clear and long term strategy backed up by a robust business plan.

Understand the local culture and etiquette: Omanis are probably one of the friendliest people in the world. However they also have their own distinctive culture and business ways. Most business people, wherever they are in the world, recognise that joint ventures rarely succeed if they cannot get on with the JV partner. So choose wisely.

In conclusion, whether business leaders are setting up in their own back yard or internationally in places like Oman, it is always hugely challenging regardless of the success of the service or product. Each country has its own idiosyncrasies and Oman is no exception. The government continues to look at ways to improve incentives and cutting bureaucracy to encourage inward investment but in comparison to many Europeans, Far Eastern and even Middle Eastern countries it remains challenging unless they select a local 'Business Guru' to help them navigate through the prevailing challenges.

Get ready to take to the skies in the beautifully animated heartwarming tale Pete's Dragon. Screen Rant calls it a "dramatic reimagining of its predecessor - giving rise to a soulful modern fairy tale in the process." Despite the film being a remake of the 1977 classic, director David Lowery claims his version to be more of a "re-invention," as opposed to a remake.
